When Troy Barclay and Amber Neilson discover that a New York Police Department homicide detective has an impossible murder that could only be the work of the master killer, the Invisible Man, they go to New York City to match wits with the deadly, elusive killer. While working on the Invisible Man case, they learn that the homicide detective's wife, an NYPD detective, was killed four years earlier in a Bedford/Stuyvesant drug house and the case has never been solved. Troy and Amber come down hard on several drug dealers who witnessed the murder and get a description of the killer. As they track down the Invisible Man, he learns of their investigation and tries to kill them. As they turn up the heat on both investigations, both killers make mistakes and Troy and Amber capitalize on them and close in on the killers. In a marathon gut-wrenching firefight, the two ATF agents shoot it out with the Invisible Man's mercenaries but a twist of fate brings them face to face with the master killer. The next day, when the NYPD homicide detective comes to work, he finds a hooded man sitting at his desk. A sign on the man's back says, I killed your wife. With their work in New York done, Troy and Amber start back to Phoenix but a call from the detective sends them to the Empire State Building.
