Not illustrated. 1899 edition. Excerpt: ... on geeenhow hill To Loves low voice she lent a careless ear; Her hand within his rosy fingers lay, A chilling weight. She would not turn or hear; But with averted face went on her way. But when pale Death, all featureless and grim, Lifted his bony hand, and beckoning Held out his cypress-wreath, she followed him, And Love was left forlorn and wondering, That she who for his bidding would not stay, At Deaths first whisper rose and went away. Rivals.-Ohe, Ahmed Din! Shafiz tjllah ahoo! Bahadur Khan, where are you? Come out of the tents, as I have done, and fight against the English. Dont kill your own kin! Come out to me! The deserter from a native corps was crawling round the outskirts of the camp, firing at intervals, and shouting invitations to his old comrades. Misled by the rain and the darkness, he came to the English wing of the camp, and with his yelping and rifle-practice disturbed the men. They had been making roads all day, and were tired. Ortheris was sleeping at Learoyds feet. Wots all that? he said thickly. Learoyd snored, and a Snider bullet ripped its way through the tent wall. The men swore. Its that bloomin deserter from the Aurangabadis, said Ortheris. Git up, some one, an tell im es come to the wrong shop. Go to sleep, little man, said Mulvaney, who was steaming nearest the door. I cant arise an expaytiate with him. Tis rainin entrenchin tools outside. Taint because you bloomin cant. Its cause you bloomin wont, ye long, limp, lousy, lazy beggar, you. Ark to im owlin! Wots the good of argifyng? Put a bullet into the swine! Es keepin us awake! said another voice. A subaltern shouted angrily, and a dripping sentry whined from the darkness--Taint no good,

sir. I cant see...
